

Sub
B

1. Computerized human communication arbitrating and distributing system, including:

a plurality of participator digital computers, each said participator computer including an input device for receiving human-input information from a human user and an output device for presenting information to the user, each said user having a user identity;

controller software, running on the controller computer to arbitrate in accordance with predefined rules including said user identity, which ones of the participator computers can interact in one of a plurality of groups through the controller computer and to distribute real time data to the respective ones of the groups;

Add
BZ

Add
E4